

Mike O'Dowd Regains "Commission" Middleweight Title When Rosenberg Fouls in Eighth

'Championship' Changes Hands After Warnings in Weird Bout

St. Paul Victor, Apparently Decrepit, Forces Action Against Maimed Antagonist, but Seems on Verge of Collapse When Referee Haley Awards Foul

By Jack Lawrence

Mike O'Dowd, of St. Paul, is the new welterweight title holder by grace of the State Athletic Commission edict and a victory over its acclaimed champion, Dave Rosenberg, yesterday afternoon at the Rink Sporting Club, of Brooklyn. In the eighth round, after two previous warnings, Rosenberg again delivered a low blow, and was disqualified for fouling by Referee Patsey Haley.

It was in this same ring that O'Dowd won the welterweight title by knocking out Al McCoy in the fifth round, November 14, 1917. O'Dowd subsequently was relieved of his title when he lost a decision to Johnny Wilson, whose title in the local boxing commission and Rosenberg named as his successor on the strength of a victory over Phil Krug.

As a result of what happened in the Rink arena yesterday the welterweight situation is by no means improved. Rosenberg, never a satisfying performer at his best, was further handicapped by a bad left hand, which he claimed to have fractured as a means of escape. O'Dowd entered the ring looking as if he would not be able to go five rounds. His face showed more years than his actual age, and he seemed stiff in the knees as he climbed through the ropes.

Mike Shows Whirlwind Start
Mike O'Dowd was far from right, but whatever was wrong with him physically there was nothing the matter with his heart. With the clang of the bell Mike dashed in and met Rosenberg's rush and surprised the spectators by forcing the Jewish boy about the ring and whaling at his body and head with both hands while Dave kept his arms folded in defense. Little damage was done in this session, but the old champion was clearly entitled to any apparent honors in the opener.

O'Dowd continued his aggressive work in the second and while he seemed unable to bend his knees and moved after his man in stiff-legged fashion, he had Rosenberg on the run most of the way and did most of the scoring, though Dave occasionally lashed out with a right uppercut that clipped Mike on the jaw and jarred him back but did not stop him from pressing in.

It was a miserable exhibition for a "championship" affair, this part, particularly on Rosenberg's part, and it certainly got no better as it wore along. The third round found Dave still on the retreat and it seemed as if he was going to quit. Rosenberg, however, intent on permitting O'Dowd to fight himself out, Mike had Rosenberg backing up all the way in the fourth, the latter being active only occasionally for short spasms and relying on his right right uppercut. In this round Haley warned Dave for the first time against hitting low.

In the fifth Rosenberg started on the aggressive for the first time. He caught O'Dowd with a right hook as they came close, but Mike still bored in and before the round was over he again had his opponent back-stepping. Both were bleeding from the mouth as they went to their corners.

Rosenberg Warned Second Time
Another low-right uppercut by Rosenberg brought a second warning from the referee in the sixth. O'Dowd was still the aggressor, but it did not seem possible that he could maintain the pace much longer. Rosenberg used his left much more than his right, and his left in landing, but he soon gave way again before the forcing of the game, but weary St. Paul boy.

Rosenberg was plainly much the stronger as they came up for the seventh, but he still fought back, mostly while on the retreat. He managed to slip in some stiff blows to the body as Mike pressed in. The latter seemed pretty weak on his pins as he walked to his corner. This was the only round in which Rosenberg had any clear advantage. It seemed certain that O'Dowd would wear himself out in another round or two.

And then, in the eighth round, came the end. Rosenberg got over another good right at the start and for the first time in the fight O'Dowd was the one to back up. Dave fought his man to the ropes, where he linked it, and then came another low right hand uppercut and down went O'Dowd like a man exhausted than one who had been injured by a foul blow; there was no convulsive movement of the legs or body.

Paddy Mullins, O'Dowd's manager, and his seconds then dragged their man to his corner and Referee Haley almost immediately stepped to the center of the ring and announced that Rosenberg had been disqualified for fouling and that O'Dowd was the winner. And so the new "commission" champion was crowned.

Club Doctor Verifies Foul
Seen in his dressing rooms immediately after the bout, O'Dowd plainly was all in. Dr. James E. Thompson, the club physician appointed by the Boxing Commission, made a hurried examination and declared that there was no question that O'Dowd had been fouled. He admitted that there was swelling and only a slight abrasion apparent. O'Dowd was barely able to talk.

In the loser's dressing room Rosenberg was a most dejected person. He showed little marks of one who had been through a hard eight-round battle, and judging from appearances he had not been seriously affected by any punishment that may have been handed him. He was less concerned over his injuries, if any, than he was in railing at the Boxing Commission.

"I told them I was in no shape to fight," complained the Jewish boy. "Look at my hand." He held up his left wrist and the member was plainly fractured. "I couldn't use my left to-day, and I told the commission that I would be forced to fight O'Dowd with one hand. The only satisfaction I got was a stiff warning that if I didn't go through with the fight my license would be revoked and I would be deprived of my title."

There is much to be said in connection with yesterday's affair. Rosenberg, it must be conceded, was probably in no condition fairly to defend his title. Nevertheless, if he had even a reasonable amount of ring intelligence with one hand alone he should have beaten the O'Dowd who faced him. Another thing—before O'Dowd is permitted again to appear within the ropes he should be put through the severest kind of a physical examination. Otherwise, there is liable to be a fatality that will not do the boxing game any good. Rosenberg weighed 166 and O'Dowd 159 pounds.

Cohen Beats Young Zulu Kid
In the semi-final Young Zulu Kid attempted to do a come-back. He managed to stick the full ten rounds with Sammy Cohen, but was generally on the defensive and took a bad beating. The affair was very dull. The loser weighed 116 pounds and had an advantage of a pound and a quarter.

noon was the six hot rounds between Morse Castel and Paul Fargo. They crowded plenty of action and hard wallop into the going, and the judges' award went to Castel and was well received. The weights were Castel 151 and Fargo 136½ pounds.

Jackie Coburn and Jimmy Woerner opened the show with a warm four rounder. Coburn being the winner. Coburn weighed 132 and Woerner 131½. Harry Martin and Billy Bell, 116½ and 117½ respectively, were on in the second round and Martin stopped his man in the fourth.

Although a good sized crowd turned out for the fight a large percentage failed to gain admission through poor handling, only one entrance being open for a good part of the time. Only 2,629 paid admissions were accounted for and the net gate was $7,023.

Track Too Slippery for Los Angeles Auto Race
LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30.—Eighteen auto drivers, after making several trial trips of the oval here to-day, reported the track too slippery to race. The attendance was estimated at 75,000.

The postmaster probably will eliminate Ralph De Palma from the race next Sunday. He recently was arrested for speeding, and may be serving his ten-day jail sentence when the race is started.

Maximac Sets New Record in Feature Race

Winner of $10,000 Handicap at Bowie Pays $25.90 for a $2 Mutuel Ticket

BALTIMORE, Nov. 30.—Maximac won the $10,000 Thanksgiving Handicap at one and a quarter miles at Bowie this afternoon. Hephastus was second and Rockminster third. The time, 2:09.1-5, bettered the former track record. The mutuels paid the winners $25.90, $8.70 and $4.40; second, $8.20 and $4.90; third, $5.40. Paul Jones, Opperman, Nedra, Blazes, Captain Alcock, Bon Homme, Copper Demon, Lucky Hour, John Paul Jones and Emotion also ran.

When the star was made Blazes and Maximac went right to the front and made the running down the backstretch. Blazes led, with Maximac second and Lucky Hour third.

On the turn Maximac made his run, going into the lead and came on to a handy victory, a length and a half in front of Hephastus, which closed stoutly in the stretch run. Rockminster, which came from behind, finished third, going strong.

The stake netted the winner $7,300. The result:

First race (for two-year-olds; claiming, purse, $1,400; six furlongs)—Belphégor, 112 (McTaggart), $17.40 and $4.40; second, Mabel 27 (Pannan), $1.40 and $1.20; third, Gold Mount, 104 (Mell), $1.40 and $1.20. ## Belmont Looms Up as Rival to Southern Racetrack Classics

$50,000 Event for 3-Year-Olds Attracts Entries of Most Famous Horses in the Country; Will Not Conflict With Preakness and Derby Dates

By W. J. Macbeth

The effete East will not long have to depend on Churchill Downs, with its famed Kentucky Derby, or Pimlico, with its rich Preakness, for an early three-year-old championship stake worthy the name. Hereafter Belmont Park will find its place in the sun with the aforementioned tracks of Kentucky and Maryland, for by 1925 at the latest The Belmont, at a mile and three furlongs, seems destined to become as popular with horsemen generally as either the Kentucky Derby or The Preakness.

Last year August Belmont, chairman of the Jockey Club and president of the Westchester Racing Association, increased the value of the Belmont to $50,000, thus making it of equal value to each of the two rival spring classics for three-year-olds. The breeders of this bit of generosity by nominating no less than 440 of their choicest weanlings for 1925.

Belmont Park has every reason to expect the best of both the Derby and the Preakness in that year in its future, for by the very nature of circumstances dominating the racing calendar the Belmont cannot conflict with either of the other two blue ribbon classics. Sometimes the Kentucky Derby and Preakness conflict; last spring both were run on the same afternoon. This necessitated a split of the crop of somewhat inferior three-year-olds that had been further hampered by spring sickness and left a decidedly unsatisfactory condition, which never was straightened out. Indeed, no three-year-old was able to establish undisputed championship claims.

A Championship Race
The Preakness is a test at a mile and a sixteenth. The Kentucky Derby calls for the mile and a quarter route. Therefore, the Belmont at a mile and three furlongs, coming as it does a
